One such example is Arlington 425, a Downtown mixed-use project approved for the southwest corner of Campbell & Highland. The plan calls for 319 residential units, 7,500 square feet of ground floor commercial space, and covered parking to accommodate residents and visitors alike.

employees, entrepreneurs, and home-based workers. More commercial and residential development is planned over the next few years.

The Hickory-Kensington redevelopment area is located within a TIF district that will help incentivize development in an area of the community just east of Downtown, consistent with the Hickory-Kensington Area Plan. This plan envisions the development of mixed-use residential and commercial with multi-family housing, townhomes, and first-floor retail and services. Such development will increase property values within the TIF, strengthening the tax base, and providing density to help support area businesses.

This comprehensive project is located just east of Downtown, at and around the intersection of Hickory Avenue and Kensington Road.

Hickory-Kensington Apartments represents the latest stage of redevelopment for this neighborhood. This project has begun construction, with completion anticipated in 2024.
